FROM THE LONDON CHRONICLE.

Some Extracts from a political Eſſay lately publiſhed.

TO judge, whether the intereſt of one's native country is properly attended to by thoſe at the helm, underſtanding is hardly neceſſary. If a people be oppreſſed, they will feel it, whether they be * Athenians or Bœotians. However Stateſmen may magnify the importance of their office, may it not be aſked, whether common ſenſe, common honeſty, and a moderate knowledge of hiſtory, be not all the endowments neceſſary for enabling perſons, in that ſtation, to make a much more ſhining figure than the greateſt part of thoſe who have undertaken adminiſtration in this country? If ſo, what are we to think of the common cant of miniſterial ſlaves, 'that private perſons are incompetent judges of the conduct of their Governors.' Is the brain of a Stateſman made of materials different from that of a Citizen? Does not the hiſtoric page lie open to both alike? From what other fountain can the Miniſter draw his political wiſdom? What then gives him his boaſted ſuperiority? Or on what does he found his pretenſions to myſtery?

"In free countries (to the honour of human nature be it ſpoken) nothing is ſo triffling, but it may become occaſionally a party affair. In England we divide not only about national concerns; but if a Cook-maid tells a lamentable ſtory of her being dragged ſeveral miles, and kept faſting ſeveral days; or if an impoſter ſets up a parchment Goblin ‡, the nation preſently ſplits into two oppoſite factions on the matter, and we go battling it, as if pro aris & focis. When we get a few years beyond a period of national commotion, we can command a ſufficient meaſure of tranquility, to look back with wonder on our own weakneſs, in ſuffering ourſelves to be worked up to ſuch a tempeſt about a matter ſo frivolous.

"Who does not now wonder at the zeal of the good people of England, on occaſion of the conteſt between Sir R. W. and Mr. P. afterwards Earl of B. Did the latter give any aſſurance that he would redreſs one grievance of the former's Adminiſtration? When he got into power did he depart one ſtep from the path in which his predeceſſor had walked? And yet were we not, upon the expulſion of the former party, and the eſtabliſhment of the latter, as happy as if all our complaints had been redreſſed? And this ſtale dog ſtrick (I aſk the reader's pardon for uſing ſo genteel a word on ſo dirty a ſubject) has been with ſucceſs played over and over, both before and ſince. We ſee ourſelves repeatedly gulled by the falſe pretences of a ſet of ambitious or avaricious men, who ſet us a raving for their profit; and we go on from age to age, quarrelling we know not about what, and agreeing again we know not how; waſting our blood and treaſure in windmill wars, and our ink in party pamphlets, the paper of which would, if unſtained, have bottomed gooſe-pies, or wrapped ſpice with equal ſucceſs; in calling one another nicknames with as much zeal as if names changed natures; in hating one another for judging differently of what tends moſt to the general advantage, and, in ſhort, doing every thing but growing wiſer. For my part I am determined not to make to myſelf a graven image, or the likeneſs of any thing in the Court above, or in the minority beneath, to bow down to it, or worſhip it.

"Excluſive of the diſpute about the power of Secretaries of State, in caſe of libels, the ſubjects of the late animoſities were not matters of chief concern to the kingdom; if they had, we ſhould not have ſeen the Great intereſt themſelves ſo much; the real grievances under which this nation groans, are chiefly the following, viz. The hideous incumbrances of a debt of one hundred and forty millions. The length of Parliaments, and the inequality of the Parliamentary Repreſentatives. The enormous power of the Court, by means of the opportunity they have of gratifying, with places and penſions, thoſe whom they may want to corrupt. The unconſtitutional evil of a multitude of placemen in the Houſe of Commons. The tremendous power of certain tribunals, from which our boaſted privilege of trial by Juries gives no relief. The undetermined ſtate of that fundamental point, whether Juries are to decide in matters of law, or of fact. The ſcandalouſly immorral example ſet by too many perſons of high rank, and the total neglect of the manners of the low people. The univerſal decay of public ſpirit, and prevalency of political corruption; the opportunity allowed, by neglect in the execution of our laws, for engroſſing and monopolizing the neceſſaries of life, to the diſtreſſing the poor, and increaſing their numbers, and enhancing the price of labour, and manufactures. The wrong management in every particular of the helpleſs poor. The enormous multiplicity of uſeleſs and ineffectual oaths, and the cruel reſtraints on conſcience, by needleſs lay-teſts and clerical ſubſcriptions. The diſtructive effects of the licentiouſneſs of public diverſions, and of public unreſtrained lewdneſs on the morals of the people. The neglect of population and diſcouragements to matrimony. The intolerable expence, tediouſneſs and uncertainty of law, and conſequent precarious ſtate of property."

* The Athenians were the moſt ſagacious, and the Bœotians the heavieſt people of Greece.

‡ Alluding to Canning's affair and the Cock-lane Ghoſt.

TO THE PRINTER.

THE Edict againſt Luxury, in Stockholm, (the Capital of Sweden) tho' it may ſeem extraordinary to us, in many reſpects (ſays a London writer) favours of good policy, when a people grow ſo giddy and wanton as not to trouble themſelves with thinking about what is proper. When men are thus filly, they return into a ſtate of childiſhneſs, and the Government ought to take them particularly under their care. They ſhould preſcribe rules and bounds for their conduct, and endeavour to inculcate moderation in their food and dreſs.

Were it in the power of our governors to eſtabliſh a ſet of rules, by paſſing a proper ſumptuary law, it would contribute undoubtedly to our happineſs; but our debts are ſo great, that it ſeems that if the moſt deſtructive practices are neceſſary to be countenanced that the ſtate may ſubſiſt.

Drunkenneſs is decried from almoſt every pulpit; but what juſtice of the peace puniſhes drunkenneſs? It is directly contrary to the intereſt of the revenue to put a ſtop to tippling. What augments the public income ſo much as drunkenneſs and luxury; and what does that, tho' the divine may preach againſt it, will at leaſt be connived at by thoſe, whoſe buſineſs it is to put a check to it. Our condition, then ſeems to be exceſſively grevious; ſince it is neceſſary to countenance all the Vices of Drunkenneſs, Extravagance and Debauchery; for from theſe the ſtate derives its greateſt helps.

TO THE PRINTER.

SIR,

PLEASE to inſert the following in your next Paper, and you'll oblige your conſtant Female Readers.

WHAT Charms has the dull ſtupid ſauntring Life of a Batchelor, above that of a married Man? What are his Advantages? Where is the Joy of living on the Earth, without having any one Place in it that he can call his Home? What Pleaſure is there in a ſelfiſh Unconcern for all the World? What Comfort in having none concerned or intereſted for him?

The dry, dull, drowſy Batchelor ſurveys
Alternate joyleſs Nights and loneſome Days;
No tender Tranſports wake his ſullen Breaſt,
No ſoft Endearments lulls his Cares to reſt;
Stupidly free from Nature's tend'reſt Ties,
Loſt in his own ſad ſelf he lives and dies.
Not ſo the Man to whom indulgent Heaven,
That Tender Boſom-Friend, a WIFE, has given;
Him bleſt in her kind Arms no Fears diſmay,
No ſecret Checks of Guilt his Joys allay;
No Huſband wrong'd, no Virgin's Honor ſpoil'd,
No tender Parent weeps his ruin'd Child,
No bad Diſeaſe or falſe Embrace is here,
The Joys are ſafe, the Raptures are ſincere.
Does Fortune ſmile? how greatful muſt it prove
To tread Life's pleaſing Round with one you love?
Or does ſhe frown with one whoſe ſoft'ning Art
Will ſooth your Woes, or bear a willing Part?

Forgive us, Gentlemen, this Start of Poetry; the Warmneſs of our Hearts, occaſioned the Elevation of our Stile: But if we have ſaid nothing but what is true, nothing but what is juſt and reaſonable, we hope the Strikingneſs of the Contraſt, and the Strength of the Sentiment, will cooperate together to make you aſhamed of yourſelves; and as the firſt Fruits of your Repentance, throw yourſelves at our Feet, and with humble contrite Hearts confeſs your paſt Follies, and joyfully embrace the Forgiveneſs which tender Boſoms will undoubtedly be diſpoſed to favour you with.

The FATAL EFFECTS of GAMING.

Exemplified in two Inſtances which lately happened.

IN one of the principal cities in England lived Lucius and Sapphira, bleſſed with a moderate fortune, health, love, peace of mind, and two little darlings, a ſon and a daughter. They ſeemed to want for nothing as an addition to their happineſs, nor were they inſenſible of what they enjoyed; but with gratitude to heaven were inſtruments of good to all about them. Towards the cloſe of laſt ſummer, Lucius happening in company with ſome neighbouring gentlemen, who propoſed to waſte an hour or ſo at cards, he conſented more in complaiſance to others taſte than his own: Like other ſporters he met with a variety of fortune, (a variety more ſeducing than a continuance either of good or bad) and warmed with liquor, he was inconſiderately drawn in before the company broke up to involve himſelf more than his fortune could bear. The next day, on ſober reflection, he could not ſupport the thoughts of the diſtreſs his folly had brought on his Sapphira and her little innocents; he had not courage to acquaint her with what had happened; and whilſt in the midſt of pangs he had hitherto been a ſtranger to, he was viſited, and again tempted by one of the laſt nights company to try fortune once more. In order to drown reflection, and in hopes of recovering his loſt, he flew to the fatal place, nor did he leave it till he had loſt his all. The conſequence of which was, that the next day, in diſpair indeſcribable, after writing a letter to acquaint Sapphira with what had happened, he ſhot himſelf through the head; the news of which deprived Sapphira of her ſenſes: She is at preſent confined in a mad-houſe, and the two little innocents, deſtitute of parents and fortune, have a troubleſome world to ſtruggle through, and are likely to feel all the miſeries that poverty, and a ſervile dependance entail on the wretched.

A young lady who lived in the north, was on the point of marriage with a gentleman whom ſhe was dotingly fond of, and by whom ſhe was as greatly beloved; She was at the ſame time admired by a perſon of high rank, but whoſe paſſion, as he was already married, was conſequently diſhonourable. He was determined however, at any rate, to indulge his vicious ſhame; but as ſhe was a perſon of the ſtricteſt honour, he was obliged to act cautiouſly and keep his love a ſecret. Knowing her propenſity to gaming, he laid a ſnare for her into which ſhe fell, to the great diminution of her fortune. This he took care to have repreſented with the moſt aggrivating circumſtances to the gentleman to whom ſhe was engaged. His friends painted to him the dreadful inconveniences of his taking a gameſter to wife; poverty, diſeaſe, and probably diſhonour to his bed, were the likely conſequences: In a word, they managed matters ſo as to break of the match. The villain who occaſioned the breach between the lovers, notwithſtanding miſſed his wicked ends; his addreſſes and propoſals met with contempt and abhorrence; yet though ſhe preſerved her chaſtity (a circumſtance very uncommon among female gameſters) the loſs of her intended ſpouſe, whom ſhe was diſtractedly fond of, threw her into a decline, which in a few months put an end to her life.

The Act of Confederation entered into and ſigned by the Diſſidents of the Kingdom of Poland, dated at Thorn, March 20, 1767.

WE the noblemen, natives and citizens of the kingdom of Poland, and the other provinces incorporated therewith. All of us, as well of the confeſſion of Augſbourg, as of the Reformed Church, aſſembled in this city, for the defence of our rights, privileges, immunities, and liberties, acquired at the price of the blood of our anceſtors, make known to all in general, and to each perſon in particular, that after having patiently ſuffered, for half a century, all ſorts of oppreſſions, evils, and violences done to our perſons, our churches, our rights, and our liberties, we thought and hoped to obtain by our patience, obedience and ſupplications, the re-eſtabliſhment of our rights, privileges, and prerogatives, for which we ceaſed not to preſent to every Diet petitions to the Lords our Kings, and to the ſtates of the republick, ſetting forth our evils and ſufferings. Even the powers, who are guarantees of ſolemn treaties, by which our rights have been confirmed, have made interceſſions, and iſſued declarations in our favour, but inſtead of obtaining a redreſs of our grievances, and the re-eſtabliſhment of our rights, our evils and perſecutions have encreaſed to ſuch a degree, that it is no longer poſſible for us to remain inactive and indifferent, waiting for our final extermination.

Thus we find ourſelves obliged by an indiſpenſable neceſſity, and certainly againſt our will, to think of our own affairs, to provide for our ſafety, and to prevent, both for the preſent and future, our total diſſolution. Maturely reflecting, therefore, on the manner wherein we have ſuffered in our rights, privileges, and in the derogation from the ancient conſtitutions, (which confirm the liberty of religion, and eſtabliſh a perfect equality among the nobility, which conſtitutions have been declared as fundamental laws of the ſtate, and to which are oppoſed the new conſtitutions, made in time of trouble and diviſion) conſidering moreover the tenor of the general conſtitutions, and all the conſtitutions of 1573, 1576, 1581, 1586, 1587, 1588, 1627, 1632, 1648, 1668, 1674, which are fortified by a ſolemn oath, that no one ſhould be oppreſſed or proſecuted on account of difference of religion, not even under pretence of an arret, or judicial procedure, and how many different perſons of the Roman church, as well eccleſiaſtical as ſecular, have uſed oppreſſion and violence, which grow worſe and worſe, ſo that the free exerciſe of our religion is reduced almoſt to nothing; and that throughout the whole extent of this vaſt dominion, no perſon is ſheltered from perſecution, ſo that we can no longer boaſt of the ſafety of our perſons and effects.

Moſt of our churches have been taken from us, uſurped, or laid waſte, by procedures, equally cruel and unjuſt, the reparation of thoſe which ſtill exiſt is forbidden, and ſome of our poſſeſſions have been confiſcated by virtue of unjuſt decrees. In ſeveral places interdicts have been publiſhed, prohibiting divine ſervice, the adminiſtration of the ſacraments, burials, and other acts of religion. Clergy, curates, and elders have been cited before Roman chatholic conſiſtories, puniſhed, calumniated, and baniſhed. They are not content to uſe violence towards the perſons and places ſet apart for divine ſervice; they even perſecute the laity, particularly thoſe of the rank of burgeſſes, ſolely becauſe they think differently on the ſubject of religion. They exclude them in the cities from the magiſtracy, from trading corporations, and even drive them from their habitations, reproaching them with the inequality of their condition, declaring them incapable of giving teſtimony in the courts, and their children are reputed illegitimate, when their marriages have been ſolemnized by one of our paſtors.

We, who are nobles, are no way exempt from the perſecutions. Although, by our birth, and according to the fundamental laws, we ought to enjoy within the kingdom of Poland, and the great Dutchy of Lithuania, the ſame prerogatives and liberties as the Roman catholicks; although we furniſh to the ſtate the ſame contributions; although we teſtify the ſame earneſtneſs for the ſervice of the King and republick, being ever ready to ſacrifice our effects and lives; although we follow, in every reſpect, whatever is required of us by honour, good faith, and our duty, on which heads we cannot, with any foundation, be reproached; nevertheleſs we have been deprived by illegal conſtitutions, in oppoſition to proteſtations and ſolemn treaties with the powers of the

...(which do not permit any thing to be done in this matter, except by the common consent of all parties contracting and guaranteeing) successively, ever since the year 1717, of all our rights, privileges, and immunities annexed to our nobility, the door to offices of honour has been shut against us, we have been excluded the senate, the legislature, and all jurisdictions, and have been declared incapable of possessing fiefs fiefs and royal estates, so that we behold ourselves spoiled of all our birthrights. We are exposed to continual vexations and persecutions, whereof the acts of every jurisdiction are full. At the remembrance alone of some proceedings our hearts bleed, and our eyes melt into tears. In the year 1718, a Nuncio, lawfully elected, named Pietroski, was shamefully driven from the chamber only for being a Dissident. The most sacred laws of liberty, and the immunities of the nobility, have thereby been trodden under foot. How many decrees of the tribunals display terrible examples of injustice and inhumanity exercised against us Dissidents? As that Captain Keler, in the service of the republick, who within forty hours, was summoned and executed at Peterkau, for having spoken in his own defence, against the invectives wherewith a lawyer, named Wendelewski had attacked him in relation to the Protestant religion; and another person, named Eberts, most unjustly accused of blasphemy, who was sentenced to confiscation of goods and personal arrest, and saved his life by flight. M. Unruth, having lost his porte folio, with extracts from several authors, was accused of blasphemy, and condemned to loose his head and all his effects. The injustice of this sentence astonished not only the Sorbonne, but Rome itself, and the suit which was carried on, in order to quash the decree, cost him an hundred thousand livres. The same crime of blasphemy, imputed to M. Rozbicki, obliged him to leave his country, to abandon his estate, and to end his unhappy days out of the kingdom in the utmost poverty. Such unjust and inhuman decrees, issued by the tribunals of the kingdom, are many in number, yet we would pass them over in silence; but we cannot forget the tragedy of Thorn, where we might have swam in the blood of Dissidents, inhumanly executed. By continual and expensive law suits, so many families have been weakened and ruined, as those of Messrs. De Goltz, Mojaczewski, Dziembowski, Mielinski, Potworowski, Bowjanowski, and many others. The Dissident children are perverted and made catholicks, and are even carried away, as is evidently proved in the case of M. Wierszchazeweski, and Messrs. Chlebowski. An oath taken by the Dissidents is invalid, whereof the affair of M. Krenski, a catholick, with M. Dziembowski, a Dissident, affords an example which astonished the understanding part of mankind. The suit concerning a Dissident church, which was terminated by the oath taken by M. Dziembowski, jointly with seven noblemen, all catholicks, was afterwards renewed, under pretence of the invalidity of the said oath, as made by a Dissident, and the process still subsists, and costs considerable sums to carry it on. Messrs. Kornatoski, who were born of Dissident parents, were obliged, on their mother's changing her religion, to embrace the catholick doctrine after the death of their father; and their uncle was judged incapable of being their guardian, because he was a Dissident. The right of collation is disputed with us in several places. At Lesno the lord of the place interferes so much in the business of our churches that he breaks all order and subordination, and puts the whole community in confusion.

The Effects of the RULING PASSION. From POPE.

MANNERS with Fortunes, Humours change with Climes,
Tenets with Books, and Principles with Times.
Judge me by Nature? Habit can efface,
Interest o'ercome, or Policy take Place:
By Affects? Those Uncertainty divides:
By Passions? These Dissimulation hides:
Affections? They still take a wider Range:
Find, if you can, in what you cannot change?
'Tis in the ruling Passion; there alone,
The Wild are constant, and the Cunning known;
The Fool consistent, and the False sincere;
Priests, Princes, Women, no Dissemblers here.
This Clue, once found, unravels all the rest;
The Prospect clears, and Clodio stands confest.
Clodio, the Scorn and Wonder of our Days,
Whose ruling Passion was the Lust of Praise;
Born with whate'er cou'd win it from the Wise,
Women and Fools must like him, or he dies.
Tho' wondering Senates hung on all he spoke,
The Club must hail him Master of the Joke.
Shall Parts so various aim at nothing new?
He'll shine a Tully, and a Wilmot too:
Then turns repentant, and his God adores
With the same Spirit that he drinks and whores:
Enough, if all around him but admire,
And now Punk applaud, and now the Fry'r.
Thus with each Gift of Nature and of Art,
And wanting nothing but an honest Heart;
Grown all to all, from no one Vice exempt,
And most contemptible to shun Contempt:
His Passion, still to covet general Praise,
His Life, to forfeit it a thousand Ways;
A constant Bounty, which no Friend has made;
An Angel Tongue, which no Man can persuade,
A Fool, with more of Wit than half Mankind,
Too rash for Thought, for Action too refin'd;
A Tyrant to the Wife his Heart approves;
A Rebel to the very King he loves;
He dies, sad Outcast of each Church and State!
And (harder still) flagitious, yet not great!
Ask you why Clodio broke threw every Rule?
'Twas all for Fear the Knaves should call him Fool.

CHARLES-TOWN, AUGUST 4.

Extract of a Letter from Pine-Tree Hill, dated July 16, 1767.

"ROBBERIES are become very frequent lately, some of which are attended with most shocking Cruelties.—Saturday Evening last, John Pane's Shop, which is about a Mile from this Place, was broke open, and robbed of several Articles; they also took a very fine Stallion out of his Stable.—Joshua English was also robbed of a valuable Horse; they then broke into Hugh Brenan's House, but he having Notice of their coming, removed his Goods, and disappointed them of the Booty they expected.—About Six Miles higher, on Lynch's Creek Road, they met with one Davis, whom they tied, and tortured with red hot Irons, in order to make him Confess where he had hid some Money which they said he had; and after undergoing the most Savage Cruelty, was at last obliged to give them what little he had; they then set fire to his House, and left the poor Man tied, to behold his All in Flames.——We hear of many more Robberies which were lately committed in other Parts, that no Doubt will be transmitted to you; and which calls aloud for the Aid of the Legislature, through whose Wisdom and Goodness we hope to be relieved, otherwise the Consequences will be dreadful."

The following further Particulars of those desperate Villains, which infest the Back Settlements, we have been favoured with by a Gentleman who is just arrived from thence, and may be depended on as authentic, VIZ.

"July 26. James Tyrrell, John Anderson, Sill Stoaks, James Stoaks, and one Cornelius, came to the House of James Miller at Turkey-Creek, on the Road towards Long-Canes, robbed him of all his wearing Apparel, £. 45 in Cash, and a Parcel of Deer-Skins——The next Day, they went to the Dwelling of Michael Watson, and after ransacking it of every Thing worth carrying off, set fire to it, as also to his Wheat and Corn: From thence they proceeded to Watson's Father's, in order to do his Job, (as they said) but the old Man luckily got out of their Way.——They then went down the Road about ten Miles, where they met Conrad Alder, driving a Waggon, with his Family in it, going to his Settlement at Long-Canes, and robbed him of his Watch, £. 140 in Money, and took his Wife's Silver Buckles out of her Shoes, vowing Vengeance against every Person that durst oppose them: Upon which, William Watson, with his Father, Brother, and two other Men, pursued the Villains above 30 Miles, till they came within Half a Mile of Robert Ford's House, who is supposed to be one of the Party: Here they met Tyrrell and Anderson, and obliged them to Surrender, and carried them up to Ford's House; when some of the Gang hollowed out Peace or War, Watson answered Peace; the housed Villains immediately fired on them, killed poor old Watson, one of his Sons, and another of their Party, and knocked down Michael Watson, who soon recovered himself, and after discharging his Piece, drew his Knife, and ripped two of them open: This gave the Prisoners an Opportunity of making their Escape.

"Captain Gilbert Hays, on hearing of those Robbers, ordered out a Party of the Militia, under the Command of Lieutenant Sinkfield, who went immediately in Quest of them, and a little this Side Ford's House met Tyrrell, who was looking for Anderson: Lieutenant Sinkfield called out to him to Surrender, which he refused, desiring him to fire away and be d——d; they then fired at him, and brought down one of the most barbarous Wretches among the whole Crew: On going a little farther, they met Ford's Boy with Sugar, which he said was to dress some of the Robbers Wounds that Anderson carried off. Night coming on, and Lieut. Sinkfield's Party being but eight in Number, he thought it advisable not to make any further Attempts till reinforced, when he intended to pay Ford and his Lodgers a Visit, and if possible, put a Stop to those Cruelties which are daily committed.

Saturday the 25th ult. the Rev. Mr. Edmonds, and Family, set out for Georgia, where he is called to take upon him the pastoral Care of a Congregation at Sunbury.

On Tuesday Evening last, one Floyd, a Clock-Maker, being up the Path, a shooting, unfortunately met with ——Sullivan, a Ship-carpenter, whom, it is said, Floyd was Jealous of, and without hesitation discharged his Piece at him, which tore him in such a Manner, that he expired immediately: The next Day the Coroner's Inquest sat on the Body of the Deceased, and brought in their Verdict Wilful Murder by Floyd, who is committed to Goal, in order to take his Trial at the next Court of General Sessions.
